'Future Stars' narrows the gap between youths and the working world and encourages experienced employees to nurture our newcomers, thereby building a solid foundation for our torch to be passed on to future generations."

- Mr. Simon Wong,

"This programme enables us to continue to work on our goal of enhancing youth employability. In addition to providing youths with soft skills training, experienced co-workers are introduced to youths as job masters, and business professionals are matched with youths as their mentors to strengthen their job-related skills, widen their horizons and inspire them in their life planning. We hope that the multi-faceted input from job masters, mentors and social workers can bring about a positive change to youths and a win-win situation to all those involved."

- Mr. Tony Lo,

Since its launch in 2014, the 'Future Stars' programme has been supported by over 600 organisations of different scales from various industries, as well as individuals from all walks of the community. Together with the active participation of social welfare organisations and schools, the programme brings out the full potential of the multilateral collaboration among the community, schools, businesses and the Government in encouraging and assisting our youths to strive forward and plan for their future.

Our sincerest gratitude goes to all our supporters.
